St. Martha
July 29th

The name “Martha” occurs three times in the canonical gospels and is used for only one person: the sister of Mary and Lazarus. Luke 10:38–42 records an incident in which Martha’s behavior when she takes on the active role as hostess to Jesus and his companions is contrasted with that of her sister. John 11:1 notes that Martha and her siblings lived in the village of Bethany and that they enjoyed a special relationship with Jesus: “Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus” (Jn. 11:5). Sometime later, Jesus is a guest in the house at Bethany and John has Martha serving the meal and Mary anointing his feet with fragrant ointment and drying them with her hair (Jn. 12: 1–8). The character of Martha as portrayed by Luke and John is remarkably consistent. She is practical, active and outspoken. In Luke she takes charge of the mealtime preparations and, in front of the guests, berates her sister for failing to help her. In John’s account of the raising of Lazarus, Martha takes the initiative. She goes out to meet Jesus as he approaches the village and chides him for not coming sooner. Her strong sense of practicality surfaces as she reminds Jesus that, after four days in the grave, her brother’s body will have begun to decay. Of particular interest in John’s account is Martha’s confession of faith in Christ. While Mary remains at home, grief-stricken, Martha engages in a theological discussion with Jesus concerning the resurrection of the dead (Jn. 11:21–27). This discussion reaches a climax when Martha asserts, “I believe that you are the Christ, the Son of God, he who is coming into the world” (Jn. 11:27).
